3 years living with MS

This year has been especially rough for me. 4 relapses this year. Having one as I type this (I think ;)) I last attack was severe nerve pain in my legs. I couldn't walk for 4 days. So I purchased my first chair and started on Neurontin. Fatigue has been the worst, finally gave into getting the handicap tag. 4 attacks this year alone. But I am still hopeful that a cure will be found and that I can face this thing no matter what. With my loving boyfriend and daughter by my side, I've never felt alone in this.

I'm so excited about this years walk, it will be my 4th one! 3rd one as a team captain! Go The Wright Way!

Walk with us, Modesto Ca 2011

The only way to beat MS is if we all band together to get the word out. I was Officially diagnosed in Aug of 2007 when I lost the use of my right leg over the period of a couple of days. Thankfully I have regained the use of my leg, but it was very devastating in the beginning. I was gainfully employed on a Friday and disabled on the following Monday.

I have since returned to school 30 years after I thought I was done with all that and got my degree in electronic systems technology and am currently looking to return to the workforce. please join me in trying to make sure others have the support that they need and hopefully some day cure MS.

This year I am proud to be the Modesto Ca 2011 walk ambassador

For the Stansbury-Pickford-Harper Families

I started walking back in 1997 in Anchorage, Alaska. Just after I graduated from High School when I found out that a class mate and later friend was diagnosed with MS and I saw first hand how devastating this disease can have on someone. When I moved to Santa Cruz, CA I decided I wanted to continue to be involved. My second year here I decided to get more involved in the Monterey Walk MS and became a volunteer and committee member and it has been so much fun.

This last year my cousin's husband was diagnosed with MS. They have a 4 year old little boy and have twin boys who are now about 1.5 years old. The disease has been very challenging for them, her husband has several brain lesions and it is hard for him to play with his kids now. It just breaks my heart and I hope that we can find better treatments and someday a cure for this terrible disease.

Mrs Jenifer Ulam

After over 7 months of fear, confusion and not knowing what my future held for me I was diagnosed with MS. Without the help of my loving husband and best friend Joel and the very supportive circle of friends we have been fortunate to have in our lives I dont know were I would be. God bless all of you and thank you for taking part in our lives

Walking for Me and my wonderful family that supports me each day!

February 1997 seems like a lifetime ago but that is when I found out that I have MS. What a scary moment sitting in that dr's office hearing those words. Well now 13 years later MS is something that I have but with the support of my family and friends as well as the National MS Society, it is very manageable. MS has been a reminder in my life to enjoy each day to the fullest as you are not guaranteed the next. 17 years of marriage and three boys later, my life is very full and MS is just one part of it. I could never get through the tough days without the support of my family, they have been my rock on these years.

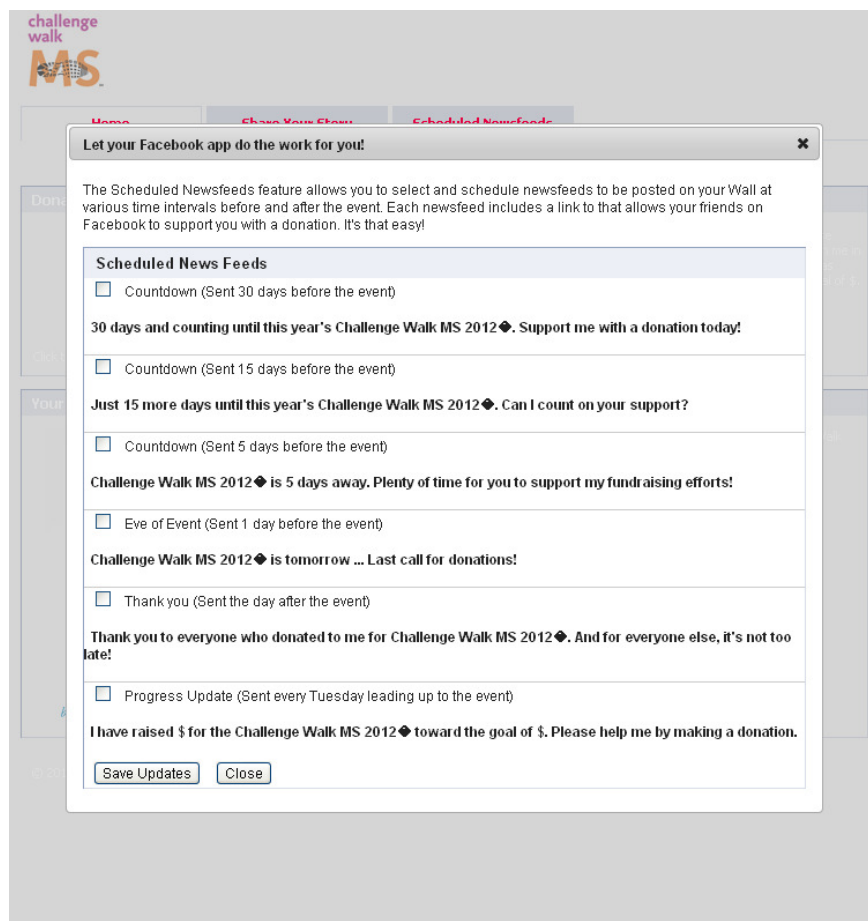

Walk for MS and let's beat this thing!

4. Progress Badge This feature allows the participant to track their fundraising progress. The thermometer and raised amount update daily as the participant reaches closer to their goal. The participant can also access their Participant Center page by clicking on the “My Participant Center” button. The refresh button allows the participant to instantly update their badge with the click of a finger.

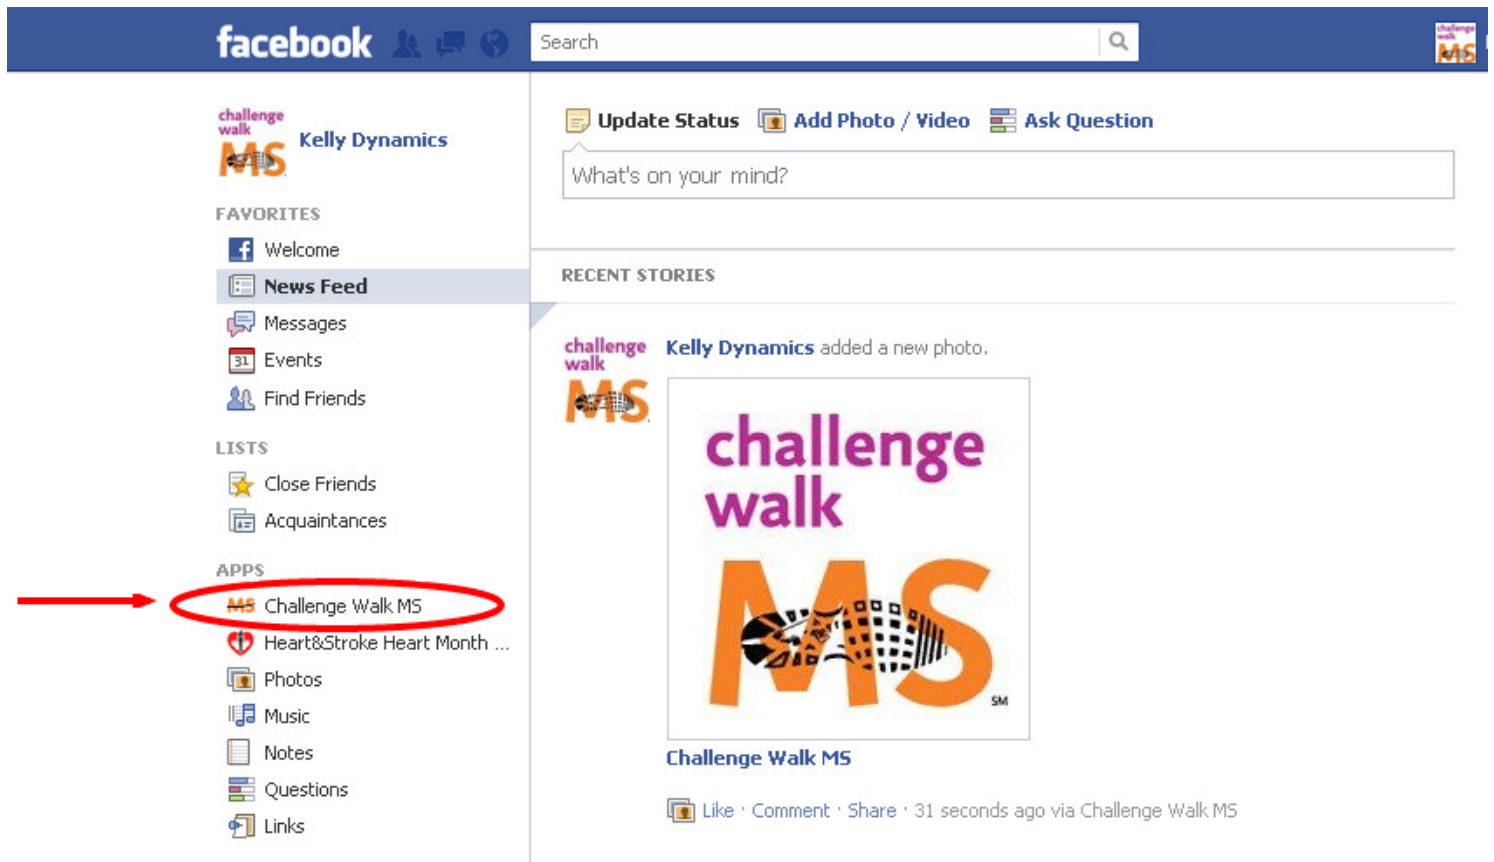

5. Scheduled Newsfeeds

Let the application do the work for you. The Scheduled Newsfeeds feature allows you to select and schedule automated messages to be posted on your Wall at various time intervals before and after the event. Once you’ve selected and saved the messages you would like to send, the application does the rest for you. It’s that easy.

Once I've installed the Boundless Fundraising application how do I access it from Facebook?

The participant can access the application at any time by clicking on the Challenge Walk MS icon on the left side of their Facebook home page.
